

“UNLIMITED”

by Wassila Hadoum

“UNLIMITED”, is a project inspired by the backgrounds of teenagers seeking safety, from the Youth Center of Epirus (YCE). It consists of a handmade patchwork, in which each teenager wrote his biggest dream.

Each year, the YCE welcomes young people from different countries to give them nonformal education, so they can fit in the society the best way possible. As I had the chance to exchange, share moments with them and hear their stories, for two months long service, I wanted to create something that would represent each of them.

The patchwork presents itself as a symbol of hope for the young. It reminds us that they have the right to dream and pursue their goals, regardless of the difficulties they have faced in the past. Every piece of fabric is unique, just like every dream, but when they come together, they form an inspiring composition that speaks to the collective strength of these young people.

The main goal of this project is to permit every person who sees this piece, to project themselves in a better environment and to encourage their own perspectives. Moreover, this is a non-definitive project as through the months and the years, teenagers come and leave... Those who are interested in letting their print in this creation are completely welcome to do so.
